For a town considerably remove from the city of New York, where were enacted the tragic events of three years ago that reached a climax Friday in the execution of Lieutenant Charles Becker of the New York police force for the part he was accused of having in the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the New York gambler, this city had a rather unusual interest in three of the prominent characters.

AND HIS TEACHERS. Subject Treated by Superintenden Boods of New Haven at Summe School.

At the summer school at Storrs on Thursday Supt. F. H. Beede of New Haven lectured to the supervisors on he subject of The Superintendent and His Teachers.

Haven lectured to the supervisors on the subject of The Superintendent and His Teachers.

Mr. Beede first spoke of the rural schools in the state. He called to mind the condition of the rural schools 20 years ago and said: "In no state in the union has there been more progress in the rural schools than in the rural schools than in the rural schools of: Connecticut. In many ways the rural schools surpage city schools. "There are threes functions that belong to the superintendent of schools that no one else has anything to do with. The first is the outline and interpretation of the course of study; the second is the selection of the text books and the third is choice and supervision of teachers.

what they ought to do about the protesting petition.

The members present Friday evening were President Charles O. Murphy, B. P. Bishop, Dr. P. J. Cassidy, Judge T. J. Kelly and Robert McNeely, In the absence of Secretary H. M. Lerou, Mr. McNeely acted as secretary pro tem.

Bids on the painting to be done in two school houses were opened and the contracts were awarded to the lowest bidder in each case. They were as follows:

and the third is choice and supervision of teachers.

There are three classes of teachers in rural communities: the old teachers of experience who have motherly instincts, the teachers who are dependent on the committeeman and have no real professional spirit, and the young teacher who is fresh from the normal school. Superintendents should aim for a professional standard of work in the case of all teachers.

"Teachers should be rated by superintendents. There are teachers who never care to do more than is definitely required of them. Then there is a class of teachers who are enthusiastic and energetic and wish to do all that they possibly can do for the good of the children. Teachers who giory in doing as much as they can. We want teachers of the latter class who overflow in their enthusiasm. We want teachers who reach something like 100 per cent, in efficiency." At Laurel Hill—Allyn M. Brand $200, H. P.
